Diner's Guide to Prehistory HUNTING AND GATHERING AT ANTHROCON

ong before recorded history, not too far from some cave full of the earliest sapient beings, one creative individual found that most important of technological advances, the one which would catapult her people into a headlong rush of development: the willful creation of fire. Imagine the amazement in her eyes as she stared at the dancing flame of power and potential. Imagine the very next thought that had to have run through her mind:

"Not a bad start, but I'm still hungry."

That's right where our cover story, "Diner's Guide to Prehistory", comes in. For the modern cave-person, being any distance away from familiar ground can be disorienting when it comes time to fill that gnawing hunger. This Guide provides a comprehensive directory of the best spots to hunt down or gather up some food, so you can spend less time with a basket or a spear and more time telling stories or trading cave painting techniques.

Within these pages, you'll find a complete listing of eateries, restaurants, and various other food vendors, all sorted alphabetically within categories of cuisine. For nearly every single listing, we've included a phone number, hours of operation (as of the time of publication, subject to change, natch – yr. ed.), street address, a grid location, and a unique number. These latter two should make everything simple to find on the labelled map at the centre of the booklet. Furthermore, this year introduces two often-requested features: a rough estimation of average meal price, and each establishment's rating on the well-known dining review website Yelp.com. (If you find the Yelp.com ranking to be inaccurate or missing, please do your part to improve it; visit the website and write your own review!)

Throughout this Guide, some entries have special notations after the name of the business indicating special information:

- (D) means they offer delivery; let someone else haul the basket!
- (V) means they offer vegetarian fare for those more gatherer than hunter.
- (GF) means the bar is known for being particularly gay-friendly.

At the very end of the Guide is a list of ATMs, convenience stores and other retail locations which offer non-food goods. The other side of this page has a map of the unique area known to the local clans as "The Strip".

Life can be chaotic enough in this Age of Stone. May this Guide simplify it.
